The Rewards of Horse Ownership

To the casual observer, the rewards of owning a horse may not be apparent. For those of us who have had the honor and privilege of ownership, we know differently. Whether you have owned one or 100 horses, you know that the rewards of this great partnership between human and equine are often too moving to express.

For children the true rewards may not be seen until later in life when they look back on their youth and fondly remember the long hours at the barn grooming, bathing, feeding and spoiling their friend. They will look back on those times and see how much ownership of their horse or pony shaped their adult lives. Horse ownership will teach responsibility, priority management, compassion and other character strengths too numerous to mention. Children will learn to appreciate the people around them that help make their dreams a reality. They will form lifetime friendships and networks based on a passion for horses. View An Educator's and Parent's Guide to Riding to learn more.

For the adult owner the rewards are similar, but often felt differently. Between a career and often a family, it may seem that there is no time for anything else. When you own a horse you make the time. You make the time to ride, groom, and care for your new family member. Time with your horse is time that often cannot be explained to anyone who has never owned a horse. It is the serenity, challenge and reward of time spent with and showing your horse. The friends you make at both the barn and at shows will often last a lifetime. It is a community built around a passion for horses.

Horse ownership can also be a business venture. Time and money spent on your horse may increase the value of your horse. As you or your rider move through the levels of competition it is often necessary to sell your horse and buy another one that is more suited for new goals. Buying and selling horses can be personally and financially rewarding. There are numerous opportunities either through individual or syndication partnerships to realize both competitive and economic goals.

This guide is designed to help you, as a horse owner, make informed decisions and assist you in enjoying your experiences with horses.

USEF Safe Sport Initiative

The intent of the Safe Sport Initiative is to provide information, resources, and a protocol so that all members of the equestrian community have awareness, tools, and a support structure to ensure a safe and positive environment for equestrians to develop their skills. The USEF depends on the eyes and ears of its athletes, coaches, and USEF Designees to support its Safe Sport policies. It is requested that all who participate in equestrian sport become familiar with the content of the handbook and be mindful of its guidelines during training sessions and competitions.

The USHJA Code Of Conduct For Horse Welfare

The USHJA expects that every person involved in showing horses adheres to the UHSJA's Code of Conduct for the Welfare of the Horse:

Horses are one of only a few animals used as athletes, often required to undergo extensive training before reaching their physiological or psychological limits as competitive individuals. Under these circumstances, decisions about horse welfare may be strongly influenced by the potential benefits to the rider, the owner or trainer. Therefore, all equestrians must acknowledge and accept that at all times the welfare of the horse is the first priority and must never be second to competitive or personal commercial influences.

The well-being of the horse takes precedence over the demands of trainers, riders, owners, organizers, sponsors or officials.

Competition management must always consider the horses' welfare relative to the competition and schooling areas, ground surfaces, weather conditions, stabling, equipment and other related site safety issues.

USHJA Member Code of Conduct

As members of the USHJA, we recognize our role in furthering the hunter and jumper sport by holding ourselves to the highest ethical standards. We further agree:

- To adhere to the rules and standards set forth by the USHJA and the USEF and to work to further their goals and objectives.
- To ensure that the welfare of the horse is the foremost consideration and that every horse shall be treated humanely, with dignity and compassion.
- To conduct all business affairs with transparency; to promote confidence among equestrians and the public in the hunter/jumper industry.

Selecting a Trainer and Other Sport Professionals

The sport of hunters and jumpers is a team sport. In addition to our horses and riders, the team will have a group of support professionals which will include trainers, veterinarians, farriers, grooms, and even sport psychologists. The owner, rider, and trainer head up this team.

Selecting a trainer is the most important decision you will make as an owner. Take your time and do your due diligence. Select an individual that fits your goals and personality. Evaluate the various trainers as you would any other advisor. Go to horse shows and talk to parents, riders, and other participants.

Watch a potential trainer school a child or adult for the show ring. Observe both the rider's performance and the trainer's pre and post-performance feedback. Also, get a feel for the culture of the barn and if that would be a suitable fit for you.

The trainer's skill as both a rider and horseman will also impact your decision. If you plan to have the trainer show your horse for you, watch him or her compete on other horses. Take notice of the care and condition of the trainer's current horses. Select a trainer who will keep you informed about your horse's program and is open in discussing their preparation and medication philosophy and routines.

Realistically evaluate the level at which you want to participate in horse ownership along with the resources necessary to do so. Understand a potential trainer's fee structures, ask for a written fee schedule, and set a realistic budget. When setting your budget, remember to include all the initial purchase items such as tack and equipment and ongoing maintenance such as board, farrier, vet, and insurance. Horses are an investment in yourself and your enjoyment, and this is the greatest return on your investment.

Once you have selected a trainer or riding program, allow the professionals on your team to do their jobs. Stay informed, but allow them to do what you hired them to do which is to provide expert advice and skills.

If your goals change and you feel you need a change of trainer, have an open and honest discussion with your trainer and be clear concerning your intentions. Pay your bills to all providers in a timely manner.

Purchasing Your First or Next Horse

There are varied reasons to purchase a horse or pony. You might be looking for one for yourself, or your child, to ride and show. You may want to buy a young horse to develop into a prospect for you to compete at a future date. Or, you might be looking for a young horse to be trained and shown by a professional as an investment, or for the sport of watching your horse compete.

Always keep in mind that this purchase is a commitment to a noble animal. It is your responsibility to be an educated and involved owner. Please refer to the Horse Welfare Guide of the USHJA for reference articles and pointers to help you fulfill your obligations in this wonderful partnership.

The cost of horses varies depending upon level of performance, innate talent, show record, vet issues, and age. Discuss your budget with your trainer or agent and do not try horses that are not within your budget. Clarify commission fees and costs involved in the search process. (Generally, commissions range from 10-15% of the purchase price.) When buying and selling horses, a reputable trainer will stand behind the horse they sell you to ensure it is a good fit for your needs and to help you find a solution should the horse not work out as expected.

Before the search begins many buyers and sellers choose to consult an attorney that specializes in Equine Law. This will ensure that your horse purchase complies with both Federal and State laws. This is also the time to execute an agency agreement between you and your agent. (Link or page)

Remember, you are looking for a unique individual not a commodity so keep in mind the following possibilities when searching for a new horse:

- “Bringing along” a young horse or pony offers the reward of watching the youngster develop into a possible champion. This is usually a long-term process so be sure it fits your show goals.
- Rescuing a horse that is no longer suitable for his current job (e.g. a thoroughbred racehorse) and re-training him to do a job for you is a rewarding option. This also can be a long term process.
- A horse at the peak of his successful show years affords the owner the satisfaction of owning and riding a champion. This will probably be the most expensive option.
- An older, “Schoolmaster,” usually over 25 years of age, offers the reward of having him teach you the ins and outs of riding and horse mastership. With the older horse comes the responsibility to retire him properly when his career comes to an end. Do not abandon an older horse to questionable circumstances. He may end up at a sale where he is sold and shipped long distances under dangerous circumstances to be inhumanely slaughtered for meat. If you are unable to finance an appropriate retirement arrangement for your horse, it is your responsibility to see that he is humanely destroyed. Find out more about Equine Retirement Facilities.

While knowledge is power, ignorance is not a defense. If you are a professional representing buyers and sellers – or if you are a buyer or seller – you need to know the laws governing equine transactions. A Summary of Requirements Outside of State Law

Uniform Commercial Code Covering Horse Transactions

The Uniform Commercial Code (“UCC”) is a comprehensive body of laws governing commercial transactions in the United States.

These laws regulate sales by merchants and a seller would be deemed a merchant if he holds himself out as having knowledge or skill peculiar to the goods involved in the transaction. In addition, merchant status can be imputed to the seller if he employs an intermediary (broker, agent, trainer, or knowledgeable friend) to make the sale. If the seller is found to be a merchant, the transaction will carry implied warranties of merchantability and fitness for a particular purpose.

State Consumer Protection Act and Consumer Protection Laws (“CPAs”)

Every state has common law fraud statutes which exist to address deceptive and unfair practices. CPAs seek to protect a buyer from the perceived imbalance of knowledge and experience held by sellers in the equine industry. CPAs overrule a defense that the challenged action is accepted practice or customary in the industry.

Possible consequences

- Punitive damages and payment of attorney’s fees

DEFINITION OF TERMS:

AGENCY: The fiduciary responsibility of an agent is to ensure the transaction meets the best interest of the client.

DUAL AGENCY: A Dual Agency situation exists when an individual (trainer, coach, agent or other) represents a purchaser in a purchase or lease transaction and receives compensation as such and who also receives compensation directly or indirectly from the seller or another individual in the transaction. This is a situation that needs to be disclosed and agreed upon by the seller and purchaser.

ANGELA PRICHARD

The Trial Process

Trying a horse is a fun and exciting process. This is the step in the purchase where you rely heavily on your trainer's expertise to find you the best horse for your needs. Your trainer or agent brings years of experience and networking resources to the process of finding your new horse. If you have chosen this member of your team wisely, they will have the expertise to evaluate your goals and the abilities to find a suitable horse within your budget.

Do not waste time and energy trying a horse that is out of your price range or level of ability. Keep an open mind and do not rule out a horse that is not attractive enough in your estimation. Personality and fit are often the most important characteristics of a rewarding match.

You may have to travel to try the horse at another barn or horse show. If you are fortunate, you may be able to take the horse on trial for a few days or weeks. If not, go back and try the horse again another day and in a different ring, if possible. Confirm that your trainer has made inquiries about the horse and its experience. Do your due diligence and confirm the horse's show record with the USEF and/or your local affiliate organization.

If you do take the horse on trial it is recommended that you have a signed Pre-Purchase Trial Contract. You may be expected to have an insurance binder on the horse, as well as being responsible for any vet and farrier bills that may be incurred during the trial. You will probably pay transportation costs to and from your farm, and boarding expenses while he is there. If you decide to return the horse, return him in the same or better condition than you received him.

The sale of a horse is not final until the funds have been transferred to the former owner or his agent. Therefore, there is always the possibility that if funds are not transferred in a timely manner the horse may be made available to other prospective buyers.

The Pre-Purchase Or Pre-Lease Vet Exam

Before leasing or purchasing, you should have a vet perform a pre-purchase exam on the horse. The extent of that exam will vary according to the intended use, price, and your trainer's and your comfort level with how much information you will need to make a decision. The vet exam is not the place to "save money" since buying an unsuitable horse is very expensive in the long run. Each owner and trainer team has a different "comfort zone" on problems that come up on the pre-purchase exam. Many vetting issues can be managed with proper maintenance. Very few horses vet perfectly. The ideal "first horse" for a beginner, probably an older one, may be able to live a comfortable and useful life despite numerous vetting issues.

Whenever possible, attend the exam yourself along with your trainer. It is important the vet is clear on what level of performance will be expected of the horse. Ask to receive a written vet report and go over it with your trainer. Be aware of any maintenance that may be required to keep the horse sound and healthy. If you are leasing the horse, understand that you are expected to treat him as though you own him. At the end of the lease, plan to return him in the same or better condition than you received him.

Notes on Purchasing a Horse Outside of the United States

- It is not uncommon to purchase a horse from Europe, Canada, South America, or actually anywhere in the world. Often the procedures for purchasing will be a little different than what has already been described.
- It is customary that your trainer will have developed partnerships with agents in other countries. These agents are very knowledgeable about what horses are available in their areas.
- Once a horse has been found that will serve your purposes, you may decide to go and try the horse, or in fact, purchase the horse without a trial.
- The same procedures for agency agreement, vetting and sale documentation should be followed.
- Don't forget to factor in the currency exchange rate when discussing purchase prices.
- Keep in mind that there will be flight costs and possibly quarantine expenses associated with purchases out of the country.

Notes on Leasing Rather than Buying

- Due to various circumstances you may choose to lease a horse rather than buy.
- Since leasing is often factored at approximately one-third to one-half of the purchase price of the horse this can be an opportunity to show the quality of horse that would otherwise be outside your current budget. It also is a good solution for a rider staying in a certain division for a limited period of time. The option of a lease/purchase agreement may also be an agreement that is suitable for your circumstances.
- The process is almost identical to the purchase process and should be treated with the same diligence. There will be a lease document that describes the terms and conditions of the lease of this particular horse.
- A leased horse must be treated with the same care and respect as a horse you would own. He should be returned to his owner in the same or better condition than when you acquired him.

Notes on Insurance

- Once you have either leased or purchased your new horse it would be advisable to talk with an equine insurance agent to go over the many coverages that are available to protect you and your horse.
- Practical Horseman ,July 2003. did a comprehensive article on options in equine insurance. <http://practicalhorsemanmag.com/article/understand-equine-insurance>

Do these 4 things in each horse transaction

1. Consult an equine law attorney
2. Execute a purchase sale agreement
3. Conduct a comprehensive pre purchase pre lease exam
4. Execute a bill of sale that complies with the state laws for the transaction

1 The content of these sample documents is offered only as a public service to the USHJA community and does not constitute solicitation or provision of legal advice. This site should not be used as a substitute for obtaining legal advice from an attorney licensed or authorized to practice in your jurisdiction. You should always consult a suitably qualified attorney regarding any specific legal problem or matter.

2 As with all of the sample documents displayed by the USHJA, it is the best practice to retain an attorney who has the opportunity to familiarize him or herself with the specifics of each transaction and customize documents to the needs of that transaction depending upon the exact arrangement with the Horse in question.

3 These paragraphs would likely be modified depending on the actual ownership interests for the Horse as there may be more than one party with an ownership interest. In any case, all parties' interests should be disclosed.

Show Day Expectations

Levels of Competition:

Unrated

Local or schooling shows. Many are recognized and governed by your local organization (e.g. Ohio Hunter and Jumper organization) and count toward that organization's year end awards.

Rated

These can be local or national. They are sanctioned by the United States Equestrian Federation and governed by their rules and regulations. The points will count for National and Zone awards. There are four levels of rated shows: Premier, National, Regional I, and Regional II.

Show Responsibilities:

- Always put the welfare of the horse first.
- Be aware of your horse's program and his medication routine. It is more important than ever that owners be familiar with the USEF Chapter 4 Drugs and Medications GR 404: Responsibility and Accountability of Trainers and Other Persons Responsible.
- Effective Dec. 1, 2016, this rule was broadened to include riders, owners, trainers and other support personnel as responsible parties that could be held accountable for medications administered to their horse. It may be prudent to have a signed letter of agreement with the horse's trainer stating customary show medications and standard show preparation.
- Discuss the paperwork and checks that are needed to enter a show.
- Show your appreciation to the support staff.
- Be courteous and respectful in the schooling ring and to the horse show staff.
- Create and maintain good communication with your trainer as to the career strategies for you and your horse.
- Sportsmanship is the foundation of our equestrian sport
